This is a circular route on with some moderate slopes. You will walk on field tracks, bridleways and woodland paths. There is no road walking on this route. Some of the paths may be waterlogged or very muddy after heavy rain. This is a very interesting route as you will have wonderful views over the river Orwell and also a very clear view of activities on the Port of Felixstowe.

① From the car park, turn right (south west) along the popular bridleway past Searsons Farm and Bidwells' buildings on the left. The wide track slopes gently down towards the Port of Felixstowe so you will see the cranes in the distance. There are lovely views over the countryside to the river Orwell on your right. About half way down the bridleway is a bench on your left to enjoy the views. Carry on through a row of trees called Christmasyard Wood.

⑤ Turn right here and walk back to the car park. There are lovely countryside views to your left.
